TUESDAY MORNING NOV. 11, 1862.

THEATER.-We understand that the doors of our theatre will again be thrown en on Wednesday night. The prospects at present are very flattering for a brilliant season during the coming winter. We have every assurance from the Manager that it is his intention to make the theatre, in every respect, all that could be desired even by the most fastidious; and we know that he will do what he says. Mr. S:Mons, the treasurer, left this city some days ago for the purpose of naking some additions to the present ompany. The theatre is still unier the management of that clever gentleman, S. B. DUFFIELD, and we exect to see upon the Nashville boards luring the present season some of the irst dramatic talent in America.

Mr. B. C. TRUMAN, the accomplished my correspondent of the Philadelphia ress, who has been in the city for several nonths, left on Sunday morning for the at him from the bridge, but splashed East. During his stay with us, he was harmlessly in the water around him. ngaged in the Provost Marshals office, there he made himself a general favorite y his polite manners and obliging disosition. His hosts of friends here remember him as a gentleman of fine talent nd accomplishments, and a "gay and stive cuss," whom they will always be lad to welcome.

Adventures of a Courier. A courier, who left this place on the 3d inst, with dispatches to General Rosk-CRANS, had a series of adventures with which will be interesting to our readers. On his trip previous to the last one, he told a livrry stable-keeper at Franklin, Ky., to have a fresh horse ready for him, on his way to Bowling Green. "What hour will you be back?" asked the stable-keeper. "At ten o'clock," replied the courier. On the 3d inst., he left with a number of letters, both public and private. On eaching the bridge across Red River, near Mitchellsville, a squad of guerrillas dashed out and shouted to him to halt. He did so, but, as he reined in his horse, dropped his letters into the stream below the bridge. This movement was observed by the party, and several of them discharged their guns at him, as they whistled about his ears, but, luckily, none of them took affect. The guerrillas came up, cursing furiously, and a Lieutenant, placing his pistol to his head, orget the letters. He obeyed, but having recovered the letters, gave them such a wrench, as to destroy the most of them, and render the rest illegible, they being saturated with water. While he was in the water several pistol shots were fired Having reached the shore, and regarding his chances for life rather desperate, he started to run, but was so benumbed with cold that he soon fell down. The Lieutenant approached, swearing terriffically, and drew his pistol to shoot him but the Captain knocked it aside, saying that he must be taken to Mosoan, who was at Gallatin. He was meanwhile We learn that an attack was made on robbed of a few unimportant papers, and
